The Encounter of Consequence.

Hardly had the announcement of the expected party been made by the King of the Bowery when Jackie half pushed into the street. Doodles, his majesty's right-hand man, came rushing through the littl eside door.

Hey, Barney, there's a bunch of easies just drove up in hansoms and automobubbles. I guess they must be the ones you expected."

The K hg and his court were instantly on their feet to receive the party of swells, who had followed Doodles through the barroom to the sidewalk. They were five, well dressed and belonging to that class of people who are called sports and gentlemen to their faces and "marks" and "suckers" behind r backs by dive habitues.

"How do you do, Barney?" began one of them "We've come down to see if that tip is straight and if the fight is to be the real thing or only one of the usual fakes.'

"Well, happily, I am in a position to prove that as to the fight being on the square, why Brady here is ready to kill Delaney. Ain't you, Oysters?" "You mind your business," cried Brady angrily.

"All you got to do is to look after the purse part; I'll take care o' myself, and it's nothing to you what I want or don't want to do."

"Gentlemen." began Carmartin, rising from his im-provised seat, "I am very sorry to have been the cause of this little comedy, but we were here for a definite purpose and I ask you not to let any trouble this is on the level, assured Barney. "There are interfere with it. Of one thing I assure you, I know both the men, evenly matched, as you can see and the assailant and he and I will meet again to settle our accounts. Now, how about the fight, Mr. Flynn and how are the fighters?"

"It is very kind of you to look at this occurrence in that commonsense way, Mr. Carmartin," spoke up the affable King of the Bowery. "You can see fo yourself that all these men here are very rough and "Didn't I tell you?" spoke the King, evidently con-sidering this best proof of his assertion. The very charming costume shown is made of the material in dove-gray with yol mousseline and trimming of deam gui pure lace over white. With the gown s worn a hat of gray chip with pale pink blossoms. The design is a fash-ionable one and suits many materials foulard, pengee, voile and the like, as well as the simpler linen and cotton

The lining of the waist is smoothly fitted by means of single bust darts, shoulder and under-arm seams, and closes with the waist at the centre back. waist is made with a deep yoke that is faced onto the tining and full front and backs that are gathered at both lower and upper edges. The backs are drawn down snugly at the waist line, but the front blouses slightly, after the approved style. The sleeves are enug at their upper portions, soft and below and are gathered into narrow suffs. At the neck is a regulation stock. When the lining is omitted the yoke only is out and the waist, is joined to its lower edge. The skirt is out in five gores that are shaped to fit snugly at the upper portion, tiny darts completing the adjust-ment over the hips. The flounce is graduated in depth, but straight at the lower edge, a fact that renders it peculiarly desirable for cotton and linen washable fabrics. The fulness at the back is laid in inverted plaits that lie flat and meet at the centre, but may be gathered if preferred. The quantity of material required for the medium size is: For waist 4 yards inches wide, 3½ yards 27 inches wide, yards 32 inches wide, or 2 yards 44 indhes wide, with % of a yard of all over tucking 18 inches wide for yoke and collar and 2% yards of applique trim as filustrated; for skirt, 8% yards inches wide, 7% yards 27 inches wide
